Paying For Your Freestyle Sessions

All freestyle sessions are paid for using one of our in-house debit punch cards. (or you can pay the cash drop in fee each session) You load money onto the card and your session fee is deducted when you skate. You deposit money in increments of $40.00. For every $40.00 you put on your card you are given an extra credit of $10.00—that amounts to a 20% bonus! You get a $50.00 value for your investment of $40.00. The in-house debit account will be under your name, so should you lose the card you can still access the funds.

Here is how the process works:

Each time you come in for a freestyle session, you sign in at the front window on the list for that session. You can give the front desk your in-house debit punch card and the staff will scan your card for payment. The card balance will be reflected on the bottom of your receipt. If you forget the card, we can look up the number to pay for the session. When your account runs out of funds just load more money onto the punch card.

All skaters using the ice during freestyle session times must sign in at the front desk and pay the fee. If the session is early in the morning you can sign in and indicate you have “PC”—punch card. The staff will deduct the session from your card when they arrive in the morning. All sessions are monitored for attendance.
